

Wheel of Life

When you are finished the above actions then take a piece of paper and follow the example on the following page. The Wheel of Life is powerful because it gives you a vivid visual representation of the way your life is currently, compared with the way you'd ideally like it to be. It is called the "Wheel of Life" because each area of your life is mapped on a circle, like the spoke of a wheel. This also gives us a great measure when moving through your coaching to see how your tracking.

1. Start by brainstorming the 6 to 8 dimensions of your life that are important for you. Different approaches to this are.
 - o The roles you play in life for example: husband/wife, father/mother, manager, colleague, team member, sports player, community leader, or friend.
 - o Areas of life that are important to you for example: artistic expression, positive attitude, career, education, family, friends, financial freedom, physical challenge, pleasure, or public service.
 - o Your own combination of these (or different) things, reflecting the things that are your priorities in life.

2. Write these dimensions down on the Wheel of Life diagram, one on each spoke of the life wheel.
3. This approach assumes that you will be happy and fulfilled if you can find the right balance of attention for each of these dimensions. And different areas of your life will need different levels of attention at different times. So the next step is to assess the amount of attention you're currently devoting to each area.
4. Consider each dimension in turn, and on a scale of 0 (low) to 5 (high), write down the amount of attention you're devoting to that area of your life. Mark each score on the appropriate spoke of your Life Wheel.
5. Now join up the marks around the circle. Does your life wheel look and feel balanced?
6. Next it's time to consider your ideal level in each area of your life. A balanced life does not mean getting 5 in each life area: some areas need more attention and focus than others at any time. And inevitably you will need to make choices and compromises, as your time and energy are not in unlimited supply!
7. So the question is, what would the ideal level of attention be for you each life area?
8. Plot the "ideal" scores around your life wheel too.
9. Now you have a visual representation of your current life balance and your ideal life balance. What are the gaps? These are the areas of your life that need attention.
10. And remember that gaps can go both ways. There are almost certainly areas that are not getting as much attention as you'd like. However there may also be areas where you're putting in more effort than you'd ideally like. These areas are sapping energy and enthusiasm that may better be directed elsewhere.
11. Once you have identified the areas that need attention, it's time to plan the actions needed to work on regaining balance. Starting with the neglected areas, what things do you need to start doing to regain balance? In the areas that currently sap your energy and time, what can you STOP doing or reprioritize or delegate to someone else? Make a commitment to these actions by writing them on your goal card.

This 7 year plan may take some time to complete, it is important not to rush it as this plan will be your pathway towards success. The Wheel of Life will not take very long however gives you a definite answer as to where you are investing your time and energy. Identify if that time could be more balanced and if so set the intention down on your goal card and read them every day.
